SUGGESTIONS

Amend Section 12(1) of the RTE Act, 2009, for the state to provide higher access to primary education to all children aged 6 to 14 years. Section 12(1), which mandates non-minority private unaided schools to reserve at least 25% of seats in entry-level grades for EWS, should be amended to increase it to 30% for deprived communities (including LGBTQ+). To bridge the digital divide and ensure that all students have access to basic digital learning, we can take the example of The Digital Literacy Law (South Korea) and mandate that every school (including private and government) provide access to digital education tools, free online material, tablets, and laptops to economically weaker sections, along with infrastructure expansion.

Ms. Jyotika
Rajdhani college

In India, it is very necessary to establish an educational bank. The government (whether union or state) initiates itself to provide an educational loan to students. However, the government hasn't defined which particular bank will provide such a loan. As students go to the bank and ask for a loan, especially in rural areas, the banker often shows them the way out. There is no regulatory body to ensure such loans are provided. Government-aided banks such as SBI, PNB, and Bank of Baroda mainly focus on their primary objectives, and in the case of educational loans, they sometimes ask for collateral. If there is an educational bank, especially run by the government, it would be very easy for students living in rural areas to avail of such loans.

Mr. Atulit Kumar
Motilal Nehru College

Mandatory introduction of mental health classes, at least twice a week, in every educational institute (counseling) to curb the increasing problem of depression and anxiety among students, and the introduction of new-age subjects such as coding, data science, animation, VFX, etc., from Class 9 to prepare students for new-age jobs and careers.

Mr. Garv Kapoor
SSLT Gujrat Senior Secondary School

SUGGESTIONS

It is suggested that vocational training in schools must include the provision of monthly internships from grade 6 in order to increase the Gross Enrollment Ratio (GER), reduce dropout rates of students from rural areas, and make them self-reliant. Additionally, it should be made mandatory for schools and colleges to have a functional health center-infirmary, considering that only 23% of schools in India have a functional health center, as per a study conducted by the National Health Mission.

Mr. Vinimesh Bairagi
Sri Guru Tegh Bahadur Khalsa College

To address the critical issue of low school enrollment and high dropout rates, particularly among girls in rural and semi-urban villages of Delhi, it is recommended that the Government of Delhi introduce financial incentives for villages to ensure 100% school enrollment and retention of children. The proposed financial incentives would encourage and motivate families to prioritize education over labor, addressing one of the primary reasons for high dropout rates - economic constraints that compel families to send their children to work rather than school.

Ms. Dhanya Sangwan
OPG World School

We can introduce a new scheme named "Protsahna Yojna," which will focus on diluting inequality due to income disparities in Delhi, with free cycles laptops for students who fall below the poverty line. Also, ₹2 lakhs as scholarships to students who score more than 75% and have a family income of less than ₹4 lakhs.

Mr. Bhagwat Prasad Tiwari
Shivaji College

SUGGESTIONS

Amendment in Delhi School Education Act, 1973 to include mandatory training sessions for parents, either organized by schools or facilitated through Delhi's Directorate of Education. Also, UPSC coachings have to pay a high amount of money to purchase land in regions specifically Karol Bagh and Rajendra Nagar. This increases prices for their batches significantly. Hence, Delhi Development Authority (DDA) and the Ghaziabad Development Authority (GDA) can allot land on lease for private educational institutions, making offline preparation for competitive exams affordable for more students.

Mr. Kumar Tarun Singh
Acharya Narendra Dev College

I propose an amendment to Clause 24(1) of the Delhi School Education Act and Rules, 1973, to mandate the submission of annual socio-economic inclusion audits by both private and government schools. These audits would assess the representation of marginalized communities, infrastructure quality, and dropout rates. This modification is crucial as reports from the Delhi Commission for Protection of Child Rights (DCPCR) highlight a concerning rise in dropout rates among SC/ST and minority students, particularly in higher grades, driven by economic and cultural barriers. By implementing these audits, the Directorate of Education can identify gaps and enforce targeted measures to ensure equitable access to quality education for all.

Ms. Parineeta Singh
Veda Vyasa DAV Public School

Initiate an "Adopt a School" program in which private schools and corporations undertaking CSR programs will donate furniture, library books, and teaching materials to government schools and provide uniforms and partial fee waivers for underprivileged students.

Mr. Kartik Sharma
Delhi Public School, Rajnagar

Ms. Parineeta Singh
Veda Vyasa DAV Public School

I propose the introduction of a "Progressive Contribution System" for education funding, where families contribute between 5% and 9% of their annual income toward their child's education. This model ensures equitable funding by asking families with higher incomes to contribute more, while providing completely free education for families earning below ₹3,00,000 annually. Such a system balances fairness with inclusivity, enabling access to quality education for underprivileged children while maintaining sustainable funding.

Mr. Darsh Tayal
Sanskar School

SUGGESTIONS

Make sex education more accessible by expanding the Aao Baat Karein scheme, as the National Council of Educational Research and Training inculcated sex education in its syllabus, and the Aao Baat Karein scheme launched by the Delhi Commission for Protection of Child Rights (DCPCR) is a way to make it more accessible to the masses. However, for now, it is being held in only six schools in the northwest district. Expanding it to other schools will be very beneficial.

Ms. Shivangi Sharma
Atma Ram Sanatan Dharma College

For the sake of social justice, 25% of seats shall be reimbursed by the state as a part of the public-private partnership, so that financially weak students can also study freely in private schools. The Department of Education must have a check for the enforcement of this provision, and moreover, the criteria for getting recruited in private schools shall not be based on economic terms. Also, the Delhi School Education Act 1973 must be amended with the inclusion of colleges as well. The broader concept shall be taken to focus on primary schools for the betterment of such schools across Delhi.

Mr. Nazre Moin
Shaheed Bhagat Singh College

We still follow the syllabus and core structure introduced by our conquerors, the Britishers. There is a famous quote by Babington Macaulay: "I have never found one among them who could deny that a single shelf of a good European library was worth the whole native literature of India and Arabia." A person who looked down on India and its culture, Macaulay's influence is still evident in some of the norms followed in the country today. These norms, combined with an outdated syllabus, pose a significant problem. Therefore, further discussions on syllabus reform must be encouraged.

Ms. Nazmin Fathima M
Lady Shri Ram College

SUGGESTIONS

Proposing an amendment to the Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University Act, 1998, by adding Clause 10(4) to the admission policy section, which states that the Reservation benefits under the SC, ST, OBC, or EWS categories shall be applicable only to first-generation beneficiaries within these categories. Families that have already availed reservation benefits for employment above pay level grade 7 shall no longer be eligible to claim further benefits for their children. Such candidates shall be considered under the general category for admission. This amendment aims to ensure the equitable redistribution of reservation benefits among marginalized communities.

Mr. Rishi Raj
Delhi School of Journalism

A minimum of 30 minutes should be dedicated to moral education and self-defense in both public and private schools. The current education system is making the youth overly focused on money, and they must be taught to balance financial goals with moral values for the future of our nation, especially to reduce crime rates in border areas. This initiative will also help address social injustice by encouraging students to look beyond materialism, promote equality, and inspire the privileged to share with the less fortunate. In the short term, self-defense is essential to ensure that we do not lose future doctors, engineers, civil servants, and other professionals.

Mr. Bhavya Sharma
OPG World School

To ensure inclusive education, Delhi school building codes should be amended to mandate wheelchair ramps, elevators, Braille signage, and accessible washrooms in all schools. Additionally, appointing at least one trained special educator in every school will help address diverse learning needs. Schools should be provided with grants to set up assistive technologies such as audio learning tools, screen readers, and sensory rooms, ensuring comprehensive physical and educational accessibility for all students.

Ms. Archisa Ratn
NLU, Jodhpur

SUGGESTIONS

Research and innovation needs emphasis particularly in tier-2 and tier-3 cities. Establishing research centers focused on local industrial challenges would create opportunities for practical innovation. Students should receive support for patent filing and startup incubation, with projects funded through government-industry partnerships. This would help develop solutions for regional problems while building entrepreneurial capabilities.

Ms. Rashmi Gupta
Ramjas College, DU

The Gross Enrolment Ratio (GER) in India, as per AISHE 2021, stands at 27%, indicating a significant gap in higher education accessibility. Allowing foreign institutions of higher education to set up campuses in India could help bridge this gap by providing more opportunities for quality education. This initiative is expected to improve the GER by increasing the availability of higher education institutions. Additionally, it would attract Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), further boosting the country's economy and educational infrastructure.

Mr. Ayush Sharma
Kirorimal College

It is crucial to establish a dedicated committee to address the matter promptly and effectively. Several initiatives to improve educational outcomes, such as innovative teaching techniques and infrastructure development, require approvals from multiple central departments. Additional support and resources from the Central Government are essential to significantly enhance these efforts and ensure a broader impact. It is imperative that this support is provided at the earliest.

Ms. Palki Singh
Post Graduate Govt College

SUGGESTIONS

Introducing longitudinal studies on educational interventions and outcomes, similar to the Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA), can provide actionable insights into systemic inefficiencies. Data from such studies can guide policy adjustments, ensuring that the education system remains agile and responsive to evolving global demands.

Ms. Sanvi Wahi
Ved Vyasa DAV Public School

Utilize satellite and internet technologies to provide virtual classrooms in remote and underserved areas. This can bridge the digital divide by enabling students in rural regions to access the same quality of education as those in urban centers, supported by government and corporate funding.

Mr. Saurabh Kumar
Zakir Husain College

Hygiene and Sanitation issue for girls is prevalent even in Delhi Schools. Having one additional staff for cleaning of toilets after every use could ensure a high enrollment of girls.

Mr. Shorya Chaudhary
Salwan Public School

SUGGESTIONS

The budget of education is already being used and is allocated and merging was important as there is not space for new schools and SOSE schools help promote a more skill focused study which is arguably more than "teach everyone everything."

Mr. Sarvagya Jain
Hansraj College

Children from poor families often face higher dropout rates as they move towards higher education due to the need to support their families financially. Introducing a program that allows students from underprivileged backgrounds to take up part-time, skill-based work aligned with their interests could help ensure their education remains uninterrupted. Collaboration with local businesses could provide flexible opportunities, such as data entry or digital marketing, with a portion of the earnings saved for educational needs. Schools could also increase scholarships for underprivileged students at both school and higher education levels.

Ms. Deepa Choudhary
Ramjas college

Abhishek Program does not discriminate students rather promote meritorious students. These students who are academically weak, are being and should be addressed under CHUNAUTI 2018 where students are divided in groups in accordance with their capacity and teachers teach accordingly.

Ms. Varnika Jain
Daulat Ram Colege
